Dated: Nov 01, 2008

Gwen Thomas, president and founder of the Data Governance Institute, will address an international group of data professionals at the DM&IQ (Data Management & Information Quality) Europe 2008 conference in London, England.

Gwen Thomas, president and founder of the Data Governance Institute, will address an international group of data professionals at the DM&IQ (Data Management & Information Quality) Europe 2008 conference in London, England. She will be presenting two sessions entitled: "Five Things Your Leaders Must Know About You and Your Programs" and "Ubiquitous Data Governance" on Wednesday, November 5.

Thomas will be addressing an international group of leading practitioners at what has become known as the premier European event focused on Data Management and Information Quality. DM&IQ will actually consist of 3 co-located conferences; IQ 2008, an Information Quality event, the 2008 Meta Data Europe conference, and DAMA International's Conference Europe 2008. DM&IQ presenters are noted speakers and world-class experts from across Europe and the United States. This year's event will be held November 3rd through the 6th at London's Victoria Plaza Hotel.

Gwen Thomas, an Orlando Florida resident, stays in high demand as a speaker at data industry events. She recently chaired the Pan-European Master Data Management Conference in Berlin, Germany, was invited to present at the MIT IQ Industry Symposium at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and spoke at both the Data Governance Conference Europe as well as the U.S. Data Governance event. In her consulting practice, she has helped organizations from F-100 companies to regional enterprises realize their Data Governance objectives. She was chosen to deliver a keynote at the industry's first Data Governance conference, publishes <http://www.DataGovernance.com>, the Internet's largest resource devoted to Data Governance, and is the author of the book Alpha Males and Data Disasters: The Case for Data Governance. Thomas is also the founder of the Data Governance & Stewardship Community of Practice, located at <http://www.datastewardship.com>
